Try a different method iStock The sweltering heat of the summer months is a good reminder of the value of an air conditioning unit. In parts of the country such as Las Vegas, Phoenix and Arizona, summer highs can reach over 100 degrees Fahrenheit. On the other side, parts of the North-East and the Midwest experience biting cold in the winter. This makes it necessary to install a robust air conditioner unit to balance out the extremes.Air conditioner units come in portable as well as fixed versions. A portable air conditioner can stand in a small space inside the house and typically runs on electricity. Fixed style air conditioners are larger and will cost more.You can get air conditioner units for the home starting from around $250 for portable units, and $500-$5000 for wall mounted air conditioners.Reputable Air Conditioner BrandsBuying a brand name air conditioner gives you the peace of mind that the product will last. This is critical when buying an air conditioner since you will need its services for a long time. You want a unit that will last for years without frequent breakdowns.GE is a market-leading brand when it comes to air conditioners. It leads in the category for window-installed air conditioners. Some of its models include the GE AEC08LW, GE AEZ08LV, and GE AHM05LW. Another leading air conditioner brand to consider is LG. LG makes high-quality consumer electronics, including everything from TVs to home air conditioning units. The LG LW8016ER and LG LW6016R are some of the air conditioners available from LG. LG air conditioners will cost around $150-$500 for window units.Other brands like Kenmore and Frigidaire also offer great value when it comes to air conditioning. The Best Ranked Home Air ConditionerMany established brands sell quality air conditioners. Some of these include LG, GE, Amana, and others. However, another brand stands out for offering the best components and builds when it comes to air conditioning systems. That company is Goodman. Goodman is one of the best brands in the market and has been tried in some of the toughest markets around the country. Customers in heat pockets such as Arizona and Texas have come to rely on Goodman's ability to keep their homes cool during the scorching summer heat. Goodman has a solid reputation for its business practices and has also won numerous industry awards.For most homes, units like Goodman's GSXC16/DSXC16 or the even more powerful GSXC18/DSXC18 will do a thorough cooling job. The GSXC18/DSXC18 operates very efficiently, with a Seasonal Energy Efficiency Rating (SEER Rating) of 18. This indicates very efficient cooling capabilities, making it an ideal choice for the home. Best Overall Portable Air Conditioner BrandA portable air conditioner is adequate for small houses and large rooms. It costs less than a central air conditioning unit and can be relocated around the house depending on where it's needed most.Honeywell is one of the best brands to consider when shopping for a portable air conditioner. The company has highly efficient portable air conditioners such as:Honeywell MN10CESWW 10,000 BTU Portable Air Conditioner - Costs around $400 Honeywell MM14CCS 14,000 BTU Portable Air Conditioner - Costs around $500 These are very powerful units that will keep the house cool even on very hot days.Carrier Air ConditionersCarrier has some of the most powerful air conditioners on the market. The company's high-end models have very high SEER ratings. Running a Carrier unit means that you will save money on cooling costs over the course of the year.Carrier's high-end air conditioners are available from major suppliers at these approximate prices:Infinity 24ANB1 21 SEER - Costs around $4,000 Infinity 24ANB7 17 SEER - Costs around $2,600 Performance 24ACB7 17 SEER - Costs around $2,400 Performance 24ACC6 16 SEER - Costs around $2,300 With a solid industry reputation, Carrier competes very favorably against other leading brands such as Goodman and Amana. They were first introduced in the UK in 1988 before the concept was taken up by companies included AT&T Corporation, Citibank, General Cinema and Lenscrafters and introduced to America in 1992. A year later, Air Miles was abandoned in America although the concept lives on thanks to credit card firms and national airlines. General travel cards and co-branded airline credit cards offer consumers the chance to accrue miles when they shop. Some restrict the airline you can travel with, others only offer business miles, and some cards charge annual fees that might make them unattractive unless you really are a frequent flyer. How to Get Air Miles CardsAirline miles cards are very common in the market now so they're available to those with all types of credit rating, although the cards that offer the most miles are only available to those with high credit ratings. The recommended FICO score for travel rewards cards is 670 or higher so keep that in mind if you're trying to get a card from one of the major airlines. The approval process is the same as with any credit card so make sure you know your financial history and your current income and outgoings before applying. How to Redeem PointsYour airline miles will accrue as you spend and they'll show on your statement along with your credit card balance. You might have access to this through an app or online. If so, that's where you'll head when you want to spend the miles you've made. Each card provider deals with this slightly differently but none makes it very difficult to use as they want you to feel rewarded so you'll stay with them and keep spending on their card. Best Card for MilesThe cards attached to individual airlines normally offer more miles than general travel cards. It's the same principle as you find with cashback credit cards that offer rewards for one chain of stores - the rewards are higher because of the restriction that you can only spend them in one place. Taking out an airline specific card is great if that airline flies out of airports near your home but if they don't, you'll be left with miles that are hard to use. As with any credit card reward, do your homework and work out what's best for you. Fly with Airline MilesThe process of spending the miles is normally easy if you book directly with the airline through their website. There will be a box that allows you to see the ticket price in miles rather than dollars. If not, Google the airline's frequent flyer program and you'll land on the right page. If you don't have enough miles, most airlines will let you buy the remainder. If you bought each mile of the trip, you'd probably pay more for it than the ticket price but a small top up is normally worth the cost. If it's not, save the miles and use them later. Flying with Airline MilesAs ticket prices vary from flight to flight, the value of your airline miles fluctuates depending on the airline, the destination and whether you're taking a domestic or international flight. You'll get the most value for money if you chose a cross-country flight or a long-haul international trip with one of the biggest airlines. Using the reward to upgrade to a business class ticket or to fly first class is another way of making the most of your airline miles. Other TipsAs well as signing up with a credit card that gives you miles, you can also get them by shopping with the airline's retail partners. You might also want to hold off on buying your tickets to maximize the time you'll have to accrue airline miles. Don't wait too long though as the price of the flight will increase as the plane begins to be booked up. You also need to be aware of blackout dates as these are periods in which air miles can't be used so don't book a hotel and then arrange your flights if you're relying on using your miles to get there.
